

THE CEREMONY

A Church ceremony was decked with a pianist, a cellist and violinist that filled the air with classics like 'Minuet in G' and 'Pachelbel Cannon in D' as the bridal party made their way down the aisle, followed by the bride herself in the arms of the father.

THE RECEPTION

Dinner boasts a show done by the bride herself, as she entered the hall serenading her guests and loved ones with a rendition of Etta James' 'At Last', and a dedication to her new husband, a version of Rascal Flatts' 'God Bless The Broken Road'. The guests were then entertained even more when the bride and groom changed into their traditional Indian costumes and danced as they entered the room for the second time.

MUSICALLY MAGIC

THEIR STORY

Their meeting at a Salsa club through a friend didn't do much at first, but after a few years, their friendship blossomed into romance, and after several more years, Julian proposed at a remote island of the coast of Malaysia atop a hill with breathtaking view and equally breathtaking Tiffany ring, while having 'Fall For You' by Secondhand Serenade playing in the background.

THE ATTIRE

The gown was a tinge of pink, designed by Eric Choong and the suit was by Raffles Tailor in Singapore. Her saree was from Amitbals, City One. sw

Situated in the highlands rainforest, the couple took advantage of their surroundings and made it part of their theme. PEARLS & DIAMONDS

THEIR STORY

At their first meeting, she thought he was arrogant and he just couldn't be bothered. A year later, they found out that there was to be a seminar and that they'll be working together. Needless to say, she wasn't really happy about that. They say third time's the charm and true enough, they met in France and discovered each other's true colours. From then on, there's only three things left to do, propose, get married and celebrate!

THE VENUE

After an endless search for a garden space to hold the cocktail reception, they finally found it at the Cyberview Lodge. The place was perfect to entertain the two hundred and fifty or so guests, with a ballroom on top exclusively for their reception.

THE THEME

They both lived in France and being far away from family made them realize how important they were, and to show their appreciation, their theme revolved around their loved ones. Love so precious and priceless like pearls and diamonds, they had to go along with that theme. Strings of pearls and diamonds hung from the ceiling and wonderfully complemented by the soft glowing lights from the candles that were brought in all the way from Germany in ten full suitcases. Decorative items, also from Germany were made to enhance the centrepieces made from ivy, white calla lilies, dianthus, eustoma and roses.
